About UIC

Situated in Zhuhai and founded jointly by Beijing Normal University (BNU) and Hong Kong Baptist University (HKBU), UIC is the first full-scale collaboration in higher education between China and Hong Kong. As a liberal arts college, UIC aims to produce graduates with an international perspective, fluent in both English and Chinese, with knowledge and experience of China, Hong Kong and the world at large. UIC started operation in October 2005 and offers undergraduate programmes with English as the teaching medium under three academic divisions: Business and Management, Humanities and Social Sciences, and Science and Technology. UIC is planning to establish a new division associated with creativity, arts and music.

Current student enrolment is around 5,000 undergraduates, and UIC expects to increase the size of its student body as it moves to the new campus in 2017 with the land granted by the Zhuhai Municipal People's Government. The first phase of the new campus project is expected to be completed at the beginning of 2016. Upon completion of the new campus, UIC will accommodate over 6,000 undergraduate students.

Further information about UIC can be found on the website <http://uic.edu.hk>.
